

The University of Alabama is a proud institutional member of the National Center for Faculty Development and Diversity (NCFDD). NCFDD is an independent organization nationally recognized for providing professional development, training, and a mentoring community for faculty members, postdocs, and graduate students.

NCFDD will provide all UA faculty, post docs, and graduate students free access to a number of the NCFDD's programs and resources. Also, there will be opportunities to start new classes or workshops throughout the year. The Graduate School is dedicated to supporting faculty members, postdocs, and graduate students in making successful transitions throughout their careers. NCFDD's extensive assortment of virtual programs and resources includes:

- Webinars about writing, time management, and other skills related to theses and dissertations
- 14-Day Writing Challenges
- Monday Motivator emails
- Member Library
- Dissertation Success Curriculum
- Discussion Forum with faculty and graduate students who are working on their writing projects

We think you may benefit from these free resources, so we invite you to activate your membership. To do that, or to learn more about the tools available through NCFDD please complete the following steps:

1. Use the following link: <https://www.facultydiversity.org/join>
2. Select "The University of Alabama, Tuscaloosa" from the drop-down menu
3. Select "Activate my Membership"
4. Complete the registration form using your campus email address
5. Proceed to your campus email to find a confirmation email and click "Activate Account" in the email.